 GENEALOGY AND TECHNOLOGY – WHAT IS IT WE’RE AFTER? ***

by Paul S. Valasek <hallersarmy@aol.com>

Editor—I’m pleased to say an article in the last issue, “Ancestry Retiring Family Tree Maker Software,” brought these comments from PolishRoots Vice President Paul S. Valasek, and I’m happy to share them with you.

In the last issue of Gen Dobry!, Fred Hoffman wrote about how Ancestry.com is dropping production of the Family Tree Maker program and now encouraging us to store all our trees and research in “the cloud.” (Hmm, with or without rainbows and unicorns??!) I have been using Family Tree Maker since I formally started my tree in or about 1995 (along with my first computer). I use it every day and continue to build up the tree steadily. I have just gone over 13,700 members, with at least another 5,000 easily obtainable from Czech online sources.

I am quite comfortable using this program and find little fault with the design, as my main purpose is to use it as a tool, not the end of the quest. Let’s face it, we want to do genealogy, not to be techies. Yes, they can go hand in hand; but what is more important, what we turn out in the form of a family tree and history, or how we got to that point? My opinion is that we are after the tree and data and stories, not the means of getting these vital facts. What is more important? Seeing the page of a birth record from the 17th century, or the fact that we store it in a version 3.789 and we can fade it, color it, doctor it, edit it, shrink it, grow it, etc., etc. No, I want to see the original document and tell the story. What if all of those ancestral records were originally saved in the cloud, and we lost the technology to retrieve it? I’ll take a hard copy all day long. (But I also want as many back-ups as I may need).

So why are all these companies so excited about new technology? Well, that’s really simple: control and profits. My tree, becoming more and more extensive, is worth very little in dollars and cents (some may even say no sense). Who’s going to buy it? One of my cousins? Maybe, but they would want only the half of the tree which they are located on. So where’s the money in tens of thousands of hours of research, deciphering, entering and storing? Not to me, nor, really, to anyone else. But, how we store it or where we store it can make a difference to companies and individuals.

Reinventing technology is a great game companies play to have you buy and upgrade the latest versions, which basically do the same job, or nearly the same, as before. But what happens after people have the latest version and sales go down? Well, it’s simple and often done: you remove access to the old technology and force-feed consumers only the new. They have to use it—what other choice do they have? (If you’re wondering, I can still play phonograph records during power outages from recordings made 100+ years ago on a Victrola!)
Also, when the info is stored in a cloud, how much true security and access does one have over their data? I don’t particularly like to fly; but when I’m looking at the clouds, I haven’t seen one with my name on it, or a built-in lock for the key in my pocket. Once it’s in the clouds, it’s out of your hands, presumably protected. (But one only has to watch the news to find out how secure anything is on the internet).

No, I prefer to keep my tree in my hands, with all of its good news and the sordid bits of info gathered in research that many people may not want published. Alcoholism, prison time, pedophilia, illegitimate children, affairs, embezzlements, etc., can be found in many trees after collecting enough subjects. So if we do our job correctly and gather both the good and the bad for our trees, do we want the info to be available to either hackers, or hosts of corporate storage facilities? Not I.

For those who wish to use the cloud, go for it! For those who wish to keep control of their work and allow it out when the time or situation is of their choosing, better yet. Why should we lose control over our work to those who have nothing but profit and gain behind them? Who cares if a 17th century ancestor was illegitimate? I may find it of historical interest ... and even a need for DNA testing ... but to raise profits from? Not going to happen!

As long as my Family Tree Maker program continues to work and I gather more and more information and members of my tree, that is what genealogy is all about. The bottom line is the information in our family trees is there as you wish to share it, NOT the process of how we store it, gather it, and view it. Those are only techie tools to get to the final line.

Subject: PolishOrigins—Still Very Active!

Editor—Zenon Znamirowski, the Team Leader of PolishOrigins.com, sent me this note, and kindly gave me permission to pass it along to you.

Hello Fred,

It’s been a while since we were in touch last time. I have noticed that you still read our newsletters and forum as you quote from time to time some of their content to your Gen Dobry! readers. I appreciate and thank you for that.

I can assure you that we do not slow down our pace. Just the opposite, thanks to our growing team we are capable to provide even more genealogy and history tours as well as research services. Soon, we will also make available our new website including more details.

I wanted to draw your attention to a few stories published recently on our Blog <http://blog>.
PolishOrigins.com whose authors are our tours’ guests. They are also featured in our latest newsletter:

<http://blog.polishorigins.com/?wysija-page=1&controller=email&action=view&email_id=31&wysijap=subscriptions>

The stories are written by:

– Abraham, professional journalist: “Looking for Great-Grandpa Ludwik”

– Mike, professional genealogist: “2015 Poland Trip”

- Alex, traveler and blogger: “A Very Rigid Search” <http://blog.polishorigins.com/2015/12/16/a-very-rigid-search/>

– Karen, local politician: “Now I know where I got my hospitality gene from.”

- and for dessert, a film made by Alysse, professional film maker:

Subject: Genealogical scams
Editor—In our last issue, we printed a Letter to the Editor from Tom Sajwaj, who had his doubts about the motives of “Alexey from Moscow,” a man who contacted him and wanted to share family info. Debbie Greenlee, whose experience in all aspects of Polish genealogical research dwarfs mine, had some comments, and allowed me to share them.

I think it is common for us to be suspicious when we are contacted by people who claim to be related to us. I always proceed with caution; however, chances are “Alexey from Moscow” is on the up and up. Now, if Alexey started asking for money or gifts, then I guess Tom would know things aren’t right and would end the correspondence. I would suggest that Tom not share too much with Alexey; sort of drag things on to make sure Alexey is really interested in genealogy, asking for photos or copies of documents.

This situation reminds me of how Poles respond to us when we say we are related to them. Their first reaction is suspicion, thinking we want their land. We have to convince them that all we want is family.

 UPDATE FROM GENTEAM.EU ***

Editor—Every so often, Felix Gundacker sends out an update of recent additions to the site <http://www.GenTeam.eu>. This site is potentially a very valuable resource for our readers, so we’re always pleased to pass along the latest.
Vienna, January 15, 2016

New at GenTeam:

1. Diocese Passau: Approximately 13,000 new entries

2. Seigniorial entries from Lower Austria and Upper Austria

3. Vienna: Index of Catholic Baptisms in Vienna for the years, 1584-1915 – Approximately 67,000 new entries

4. Vienna: Index of Catholic death in Vienna – Approximately 26,000 new entries

5. Churchbook Registry-Indices of Lower Austria, Upper Austria and Styria – Approximately 78,000 new entries

And the beginning of recording church registers of the two capitals, Linz and Graz. Reference to the auto-complete search routine, new query possibilities: by crownland

Dear Researchers!

On my own account:

Exactly six years ago GenTeam began its success story. In the beginning there were only 1.3 million entries at your disposal; today there are already more than 12.8 million. Alone in 2015, more than 31,000 registered users have visited GenTeam more than 2.6 million times to make inquiries. And now GenTeam provides again approximately 186,000 more entries for its users.

At this point, I would like to thank all those individuals, who have furnished GenTeam over the last 6 years with vital information, all those who work on long-term projects, but also all those who have worked behind the scenes to ensure that GenTeam functions properly and continues to expand.

GenTeam is a European platform, through which historians and genealogists, who work independently or as a team on databases, can furnish this data to all researchers. All data at GenTeam is available free of charge. The use of GenTeam also requires no membership fee.

Other developments created parallel to GenTeam are <http://www.GenList.at>, a bilingual mailing list with more than 1,600 members, as well as the genealogical link collection found at <http://www.GenLink.at>.
And Now To The Actual Update:

1. Passau Diocese: Approximately 13,000 new entries

Of the now approximately 2.8 million church records from Passau Diocese, about 440,000 are marriages and are complete, about 1.3 million are baptisms, and the remainder are deaths.

In this database you will find parish, volumes, page numbers, surnames, Christian names, Date/Year or records, many times but not always profession, as well as address/place. You will find the church registers of Passau Diocese at <http://www.matricula-online.eu>. You will find a table listing all parishes with updated time frames and important tips under Hilfe/Info (Help/Information).

The Archive of the Dioceses Passau and GenTeam would like to thank cordially for the transmitted corrections as well as for all new records.

2. Seigniorial entries from Lower Austria and Upper Austria

The oldest usufructuary book of the dominion Rappottenstein (Lower Austria) 1612-1649 was updated by Magister Ingrid Schuster. Mrs. Karin Scharrer provided GenTeam an index of seignioral sources (inventories, sales, certificates of inheritances, etc.) of Kreuzen (Upper Austria).

3. Vienna: Index of Catholic Baptisms in Vienna for the years, 1584-1915 – approximately 67,000 new Entries, more than 1 million already online!

Entries from the following parishes were added: 01 Sankt Stephan, 01 Schotten, 02 Sankt Leopold, 05 Sankt Florian (Matzleinsdorf), 07 Schottenfeld, 09 Votivkirche, 09 Lichtenthal, 10 Sankt Johann Evangelist, 18 Währing, 19 Grinzing, and 21 Leopoldau.

You will find a listing of all parishes with updated time frames under Help (Hilfestufe).

At this point I would like to take the opportunity to cordially thank Eva Korbl, Eli Kultscher, Cindy Lindau, Georg Marlovits, Lisi Maxa, Dr. Günter Oppitz, Angelika Panzer, Jesko Stampa, Judith Starke, Heidi Sugden, and Margarethe Tetzl, as well to all those, who already are working on other indices, which will be posted online in the near future.

I also would like to invite you to collaborate on this project. Please contact me at <kontakt@GenTeam.at>.

4. Vienna: Index of Catholic death in Vienna – Approximately 26,000 New Entries

Since the list of the deceased in the Viennese Newspaper contains vast gaps (even with consideration of Viennese historic borders, as well as the interesting fact that on average approximately 40% entries of deceased children, age one and under, are missing); therefore, we at GenTeam have begun an index of Catholic Burials.

Approximately 26,000 new entries were added today of the following parishes: 01 Bürgerspital (St. Augustin), 01 Sankt Michael, and 21 Leopoldau. Again, you will find a listing of all parishes with updated time frames under “Help” (Hilfestufe).

I would like to express my warmest thanks to Monika Fischer, Marta Melchart, and Georg Marlovits.

5. Churchbook Registry-Indices of Lower Austria, Upper Austria and Styria – Approximately 78,000 new entries were added from Catholic Church records.

At GenTeam you will find the complete list of parishes with updated time frames under Help (Hilfestufe).

Lower Austria:
  Windhaag

Upper Austria:
  Linz-Urfahr

Styria:
  Graz Dom, Graz Mariä Himmelfahrt, Graz Maria Trost, Graz Münzgraben, Graz Sankt Peter, Graz Sankt Veit, Graz Straßgang.

Courtesy of the diocesan archives of the Diocese Graz-Seckau, the existing indexes, created due to the duplicates of baptismal records for the time frame of 1835-1889 are scanned, checked, and corrected by OCR conversion.

At this point I would like to cordially thank the Archive of the Dioceses Graz-Seckau, Franziska Heidrich, and the new teams of Linz and Graz. If you would like to also participate, please just contact me at <kontakt@GenTeam.at>. My special calling applies solely to Graz and Linz researchers, these cities are so important to expand general indexes.

Comments:

We have programmed a new indices query possibility—Catholic indices: as of now, you can choose the crownland.

The ingenious Auto-complete function will help you to solve orthographic problems, for example by choosing certain regions or names. For example, if you only want to inquire about the church records from Graz, you will enter in the parish search field <Graz>. If you search for example for the city Kleinpertenschlag, of which you don’t know whether it was entered as Klein Pertenschlag, Klein-Pertenschlag, or Kleinpertenschlag, then you enter in the search field only <pertenschlag>. Though this will increase the number of hits, but it also will heighten the chance to find the entry. The often so annoying wildcards become herewith superfluous — they are not intended by GenTeam.

You can also enter parts of names to improve your rate of hits.

We would be more than happy if you too would like to play a part with GenTeam by creating a database or furnishing an already completed database. However, should you only have questions, please contact me anytime.

Sincerely yours,

Felix Gundacker

<https://blog.malwarebytes.org/security-threat/2016/01/when-url-shorteners-and-ransomware-collide/>

Malwarebytes.org produces Malwarebutes Anti-Malware, a free program highly recommended by experts for securing your computer. They publish a blog with useful and informative posts on how to avoid problems. This particle article struck me as especially worthwhile, because it talks about URL shortening services and the problems they cause. I love to use TinyURL or other shortening services because they take long, incomprehensible URLs and produce something nice and short, easy to use. But, as with any tool offering convenience, bleeping bleep-holes have found a way to exploit something useful. One particularly nasty trick is to hijack your computer with “ransomware,” which takes your system and data hostage until you pay to get it back. This article discusses the problem, and offers some solutions, including the service checkshorturl(dot)com [typed that way to keep it from being an active link—just replace the (dot) with a period], which will unshorten a URL and show you exactly where it will take you. If it’s a server in Russia or Nigeria, for instance, you might want to watch your step. The better we all know how to protect ourselves, the less we expose others, however inadvertently, to threats.

The 3 January 2016 issue of The Genealogy News included this link to an article in Family History Daily, “How to Fail at Family History Research in 10 Simple Steps.” The article is ironic, of course, meant to remind us of bad habits we can all fall into, habits which will doom our research. It never hurts to read something like this and make sure you’re not sabotaging your own efforts. We humans easily fall into that trap, and anyone who helps us avoid it is a friend!

FiveImportantDatesInEasternEuropeanGenealogy.aspx>

The Genealogy Insider blog, by Diane Haddad, might qualify as one of the few “mainstream” genealogical publications that realizes there is such a place as Eastern Europe. The historical info in this posting from 19 January 2016 is pretty basic, and every Polish researcher should know it by heart. But I suspect not everyone does. Do yourself a favor and remind yourself of these pivotal dates that defined many aspects of our ancestors’ lives!
Thomas MacEntee posted a message on Facebook to let us know we could download a free issue of the January/February 2016 issue of the Illinois State Genealogical Society’s newsletter at this URL. I was a member of ISGS for a few years, and even edited their journal for a while. Both the society and its publications impressed me as serious resources for genealogists with Illinois connections—and let’s face it, that’s a lot of us!

The name of this site means “Polish surnames.” It lets you search for individual surnames and tells you where in Poland the largest numbers of people by those names live. While it’s much easier to use if you read Polish, the main links use the same phrases over and over, for instance, “Maca – najwięcej osób o tym nazwisku mieszka w: Oświęcim, Chełmek, Babice,” which means “Maca – the most people with this name live in Oświęcim, Chełmek, Babice.” Clicking on the link brings up a color map that illustrates the data. You can also add comments under “Dodaj komentarz,” putting your first and last name in the box marked “Imię i nazwisko” and your remarks in the box marked “Komentarz.” I’m not sure how much practical use this site is, but it may help some folks; and it may become more useful as time passes.

This site also offers surname info, this time with brief comments on etymology by Polish scholar Ewa Szczodruch, largely based on the work of Kazimierz Rymut, Maria Malec, Zofia Kaleta and others. It’s all in Polish; the list of names is arranged in a rather weird version of alphabetical order; and the pages can be hard to copy from. But the brief etymologies Ewa Szczodruch gives rely on solid research; and translating them may be within the capacity of Google Translate, if you don’t demand too much. For instance, here’s the entry for the surname Abraham: “od imienia Abraham, dawniej też Abram. Imię biblijne, pochodzenia może akadyjskiego od Aba-am-ra-am ‘kochaj ojca’. W Starym Testamentencie występują Abraham i Abram. W Polsce w średniowieczu imię częste, notowane od XIII wieku w formach Abram, Abraam, Abraham, Habraam, Habraham, Habram, Habream, Jabram.” Google turns this into “from the name of Abraham, formerly Abram. Name biblical origin may Akkadian from lampshade am- RA am ‘loving father’. In the Old Testament, Abraham and Abram there. In Poland frequent name in the Middle Ages, quoted from the thirteenth century in the forms Abram, Abra, Abraham, Habraam, Habraham, Habr, Habream, Jabra.” Except for the lampshade, it’s not too far off. (Maybe it confused “Aba” with Polish abażur, which means “lampshade.”)

In a post to the Jewishgen newsgroup, Rose Feldman suggested this URL may be a useful tool when dealing with websites in languages we don’t know. It helps with archival terminology in numerous languages, including Belarusian, French, German, Polish, and Russian.
Jan Meisels Allen posted a note to the Jewishgen newsgroup, explaining that a webinar about choosing a family tree software program is available at this URL. It was produced by the New England History Genealogical Society; it runs 45 minutes, is presented by Rhonda McClure, and is free. Given the way software makers are dropping support of older programs, as discussed by Paul Valasek in our lead article, this webinar may be of use in deciding which software, if any, you wish to change to.

In another post to Jewishgen, Jan noted that sessions of the RootsTech conference, to be held February 3–6 in Salt Lake City, will be live-streamed for those who cannot attend in person. If you are interested, you can view the schedule here. Note that the times listed are Mountain time. Handouts are also available for many sessions, and you can learn more on the home page of RootsTech, <https://www.rootstech.org/>.

Edward David Luft announced that this link allows online full-text access to his book The Jews of Posen Province in the Nineteenth Century. The book is also now included in the Library of Congress; see this URL <https://catalog.loc.gov/vwebv/holdingsInfo?searchId=4324&recordCount=25&recPointer=0&bibId=18844643>. Edward says he worked on the book for 28 years, and “it will appear on the shelf in 4 bindings, Vols. 1, 2a, 2b, and 3. Two book reviews are in process and I may be speaking about it at the Library of Congress.” Congratulations to him on having this major work readily available to researchers who can use and appreciate it!

Ute Brandenburg posted a note to Facebook’s Genealogy Translations group on 23 January, saying “Lots of German Lutheran records went live on Ancestry yesterday.” The above is one of three URLs she mentioned. The other two are the same except for the final two digits in the number at the end. Replace 61007 with 61013 in one case and 61023 in the other. Note that these URLs take you to Ancestry.de, the German version; but the page will take you to the equivalent English pages if you want.

Ceil Jensen posted a note to the Facebook Polish Genealogy group saying, “The Polish Mission of The Orchard Lake Schools just posted their extensive collection of Jubilee Books. This is a huge collection of almost 25,000 pages from various Catholic churches throughout the U.S. Definitely worth a look.” You can visit the database page at the above URL.
Laurence Krupnak posted a note to the GaliciaPoland-Ukraine mailing list speaking of the detailed topographic maps of the western 19th-century Russian Empire at this site. He said, “The maps cover the western parts of the Russian Empire and small parts of adjacent territory which were part of Austria-Hungary. Basically, the maps go to just east of Warsaw to Lemberg (Lvov) to Stanisławów (Ivano-Frankivsk) to areas west of Odessa on the Black Sea.” You will have to deal with Cyrillic forms of place names; but don’t let that scare you. Do a little exploring; I don’t think it takes too long to get oriented.

Valerie Warunek posted this YouTube link to the Facebook Polish Genealogical Society of Michigan group. It’s a video helping you learn the Cyrillic alphabet, actually letting you see how to form each letter and hear the sound it usually represents. Cyrillic isn’t really that hard—give yourself a chance and you can master it!

Valerie also posted a note to the same group with a link to Ola Heska’s instructions for using Geneteka.pl. I don’t know if you can download the file if you’re not registered with Facebook. But it may be worth a try. Ola knows her stuff, and when I previewed the file, I thought it was very helpful. Of course, I also have to mention there’s an article on Geneteka.pl in the Winter 2016 issue of Rodziny, by Julie Roberts Szczepankiewicz and Maciej Adam Markowski, and I think it’s pretty good, too!
