Gen Dobry!, Vol. XVI, No. 10, October 2015 — 1
by the Polish Mission

Editor—Rick Dorsch (photo below) is a Friend of the Polish Mission who is undertaking his family research at PARI (Polonica Americana Research Institute) with genealogists Dr. Hal Learman and Ceil Wendt Jensen. PARI supports families researching their roots and is open each Monday and Friday by appointment.

An evening chat with Rick Dorsch’s mother, Mary Lizoń Dorsch (Call Sign: WB8WNJ), on the night before she died, included a moment when she pointed her impaired hand at him and commanded “You find my family!” So, in the spring of 2015 Rick joined the Friends of Polish Mission and began the journey “home” at his mother’s request.

After an initial introduction to traditional genealogy research methods, Rick decided to employ a tool he has been licensed to use since 1968 – namely Amateur (Ham) Radio. Rick’s mentor in this field was his high school art teacher Lee Ewald (Call Sign: W8WA) who was an experienced ham radio operator. He learned Morse Code telegraphy – using radio waves to speak directly to other operators anywhere in the world. Over the years, Rick has communicated via Morse Code and by voice with fellow operators around the world, including King Hussein of Jordan (Call Sign: JY1) from 1974, until he passed away in 1999. Rick has met many Polish colleagues over the years, so it was natural to employ these methods when it came to researching ancestral homes in Poland.

The strongest signals from Poland come in the morning here in Michigan. There are no wires involved – the signals bounce off the ionosphere. Rick keeps in mind the time difference and the position of the sun, and begins to listen for signals that begin with the prefix SP that indicates Poland. The number after SP indicates the province the operator resides. Rick’s interest is in SP2- Pomorskie, SP3 – Wielkopolskie, and SP9 – Małopolskie. Rick currently has two contacts willing to undertake research for him, his longtime contact, Andy Pfeiffer (Call Sign: SP9KR), and a new contact, Mariusz Szczurko, (Call Sign: SP2YY) of Kwidzyn. These are friends in the international fraternity whose motto is “Worldwide friendship though amateur radio.” Rick first met Andy on the air when Rick lived in Ecuador and Andy was living in Ontario, Canada.

Currently Mariusz is waiting for Rick to identify the village and house number for his Dorszyński ancestors in Nowa Cerkiew parish. Andy has already traveled to the villages and homes of Rick’s Lizoń and Goldyn families. Andy found that house 37 in Obidza and 51 in Ochotnica Gorna are still standing, and the relatives residing there are awaiting Rick’s visit in 2016. Since Andy’s visit, the Tokarczyk family, residing at house 37, has started preparing for his visit, and found a box of old black and white photos that go back to the late 1800s.
Rick is returning the research favor for a “ham” in Poland, Krzysztof “Chris” Gryc of Hajnówka (Call Sign: SP4WRF/3Z4Z). Chris has a branch of his Kolęda (Kolenda) family who settled in Grand Rapids, Michigan.

If you would like to begin your family genealogy, please contact the Polish Mission’s Polonica Americana Research Institute (PARI) at 248-683-0323 or <pmission@orchardlakeschools.com>. If you are interested in becoming a ham radio operator, go to the American Radio Relay League’s web page at <http://www.arrl.org> and use the search page to find free classes in your area.

 LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Subject: Americans Teaching in Poland During the Summer

Editor—In the last issue, we included a question from a reader, Larry Mandeville, who recalled seeing previous mention in Gen Dobry! of a program for Americans teaching in Poland during the summer. He wanted an update; but for the life of me, I couldn’t recall the name of the program or the gentleman who’d written about it. Fortunately, Robert Pine, the man in question, saw the note and answered, as did a lady interested in the program. Let me print what they both had to say, for your information.

Hello Fred and Larry:

Other than a year of exchanging documents due to the paperwork problem Larry discovered, which as you know was fully corrected and resolved, everything is going very well. WIESCO continues strong in its 40+ years of English programs in Eastern Europe, especially in Poland, Lithuania, and Latvia. We also had a couple programs in Russia.

Last year, I spent six straight weeks in Poland leading a program in Mazury for Polish teachers of English, leading a youth camp on the Baltic coast for a school in Poznań, and at the English Teaching Market for 450+ English teachers, where I presented a workshop on how to use improv in language instruction. Our program in Nowa Ruda added another great success to its history.

This year, in addition to the Nowa Ruda camp, I led back-to-back youth programs in Wrocław and Poznań.

Also this year, we added a new program in conjunction with the Polish American Freedom Foundation and NIDA organization called Native Speaker at Our School. In addition to my summer programs, in April, I was the guinea pig for this. In two weeks, I visited 11 rural schools in southeastern Poland, making presentations to English language students so they could experience English spoken by a native speaker, plus meet an American. It was great.

I am sorry Rodziny was not sent an announcement the past couple years or so. That is our fault. We have had good interest and participation from universities, schools, and Polish groups and programs, and the person who handles this may have missed Rodziny. I will be sure this is corrected.

Attached is an overview of the programs now offered by WIESCO. Our board meets later this month, at which we discuss plans for next year. Once those are solidified I will ensure information is sent to Rodziny, and directly to you, Larry.

All my best wishes,

Robert M. Pine

Editor—if you want a copy of the overview of programs, let me know and I’ll send it to you as an e-mail attachment. Meanwhile, here’s the other note I received.

Hello, Fred:

I saw in the September 2015 edition that Larry Mandeville asked about a program for Americans to go to Poland to teach English during the summer. He had expressed skepticism in it initially, but now was looking for information on it. I think I may be able to help you and Larry out.

The group is called WIESCO, which stands for Wisconsin International Educational Scientific Cultural Organization. I had expressed interest in it a couple of years ago (when I was working and making some money). Circumstances did not permit me to go then (new grandchildren); however, Robert Pine, one of the coordinators, kept my contact information. I last heard from him by phone earlier this year. He asked if I was still interested in teaching in Poland. Well, I’ve been unemployed for the last two years, and can’t justify spending the “zlotys” going to Poland, but asked him to keep me in mind for 2016. I’m turning 62 this fall, and going to Poland to teach English may be more of a possibility in the coming year.

Here is the link for WIESCO:

<http://www.wiesco.org/>
And, again, the fellow who contacted me is named Robert Pine. He’s on the Advisory Board.

Hope this helps!

Clara Makoid, Citrus Springs, Florida

Editor—Thank you for taking the time to answer, and for the link. I hope you get a chance to go to Poland with WIESCO. I have a notion you’ll enjoy it immensely.

 CREATIVE RIGHTS ***

by Alan Kania

Editor—These comments need a little bit of background info. Researcher Debbie Greenlee posted notes to online mailing lists expressing her dismay that indexes of three cemeteries, which she compiled, copyrighted, and placed on Poland Gen Web with permission, had been copied by someone and placed on Findagrave.com without permission or attribution. Debbie was upset and is trying to take legal action. This led to a discussion online over whether her work was copyrightable, what recourse she had, and so on. I found these comments by author Alan Kania particularly instructive, and wanted to share them with you (but only after getting his permission!).

I’m a dismayed with the comments being made about the use of research and other information posted by various internet resources. As a multi-book author, I’m faced with this issue on an all-too-frequent basis. In this Wiki-World we’ve adopted, people think that creative rights are free for the taking—let the authors be damned, despite our thanks for the thousands of hours we put into a project.

When I write a book, it takes at least five years of research, writing, and editing to get the manuscript into book form. For those of you who believe that we strive to protect our work for a profit motive, let me explain that the vast majority of us who write make approximately $1.50 per book sold in the form of royalties—no cash advances from today’s publishers. All of my books sell well, but until people start showing the same interest in non-fiction as they do in fiction, I will never make back the costs of all my research and be able to pay off the photo-rights that can become quite expensive. So please, just because someone posts information on the Internet and wants to protect his or her investment, don’t perpetuate the false assumption that he or she is just trying to make a buck off everyone. Some of us just have a sense of pride in our work and we don’t want it Wiki-edited by people who are too lazy to do their own research.

We’re getting too used to getting our news from online sources who have no front-line journalists—they tap traditional news sources, edit the research to fit their own personal agenda, and then publish it as their own to titillate their base of minions. The original reporter who gathered that primary-source information gets nothing, and often gets blamed when the online “news” distributors explain to people that they are not responsible for “errors” that must have been made by the reporters who had their research stolen and falsely edited. There is good reason why we strive to control the results of our research: we’ve put too much hard time into accuracy and don’t appreciate others profiting from it. Nor do we appreciate it being used under false pretenses at the expense of our reputations as researchers and authors.

For those of you who seem to believe that we should freely share all of our primary-source research for those who find it more convenient to just cherry-pick the results for your benefit, please reconsider your belief—especially when you then credit someone else’s research as your own. My photographs and my primary-source research are MY creative property. With genealogy, I’ve spent thousands of dollars and over a decade-and-a-half of my own research. I don’t share my information unless I know the person benefiting from my research will benefit in making their own tree more accurate -- AND (big AND) will also contribute accurate information to help assure our mutual tree is accurate. There’s no profit motive; I’m just a stickler for appreciation of those who want our family histories to ACCURATELY portray our family.

Someone at Find-a-Grave is making money on the research that is freely provided by people. Huffington Post and others are making money on the research that is freely provided by writers. To the information distributors who are profiting through online advertising or subscriptions without paying for the research and time that went into the accuracy of that primary-source information, I say, at the very least, please respect the creative rights of the original creator of that research and honor their efforts. Stop stealing their work and calling it your own. Theft is theft no matter how you wish to justify it.

 PGSCTNE CONFERENCE ***

Editor—Marie Dallas posted this note to the Poland Roots mailing list on October 6th, talking about the conference held recently by the Polish Genealogical Society of Connecticut and the Northeast. I asked Marie if I could include her note here, and she gave her permission.

I’d like to share a bit of my experience at the Polish Genealogical Society of Connecticut and the Northeast this past weekend.

As a seasoned researcher (26 years’ experience), when it comes to attending conferences, my concern is that I’ll spend travel time and gas/airfare and the cost of registration and hotel for two nights to attend a conference where I come away having learned nothing. It’s happened (but never at PGSCTNE!), and it’s not a great feeling, I can tell you.

Diane Szepanski organizes a wonderful conference. Truly informative and vastly enjoyable. She’s an amazing lady! I don’t know how she manages it all and still seems to enjoy every minute of it herself.

This was my fourth PGSCTNE conference, and I actually walked away more excited and inspired than ever before. I learned about notary records in Poland—which I didn’t know existed!—from a native Pole, who later at dinner advised me to seek out a court record for a legal surname change notated in the margin of an 1861 birth record.

Jonathan Shea and Matthew Bielawa lectured about the basics, and I still came away with a couple of new websites and tidbits of new info. The genealogy world is constantly changing and evolving, and new information and resources are popping up almost weekly. And of course, it never hurts to brush up on the foundations of research!

Lisa Alzo gave a wonderful talk about getting and staying organized and focused and another lecture on Pennsylvania resources that was helpful since all of my ancestors settled in PA. And going above and beyond the call of duty, she gave me contact info for a genealogist who specializes in military records to hopefully help me restart my stalled research.

Editor—My friendship and professional collaborations with Jonathan Shea make it hard for me to be objective. But every word Marie wrote rings true for me. If you missed out this time around, try hard to make it to the next conference PGSCTNE holds.

 AN OVERVIEW OF RECENT PERIODICALS ***

Editor—A fair number of societies send me copies of their bulletins or journals so I can summarize their contents in PGSA’s Rodziny. I have occasionally included the tables of contents in past issues of Gen Dobry!, because I thought you might like to know about them. It occurs to me I might as well start doing this on a regular basis. These publications are printing a lot of good material that deserves more attention than it gets!

November 7, 2015

POLISH GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY OF MINNESOTA MEETING
10 a.m. – 12 noon
MGS Library • 1185 Concord Street N., Suite 218 • South St. Paul, MN 55075
4th floor boardroom

Dr. Joseph J. Hughes will present an informative, entertaining presentation, and lead a discussion on “The Battle of Saint Stanislaus: Winona’s Polish Catholics in the 1890s.” There were fistfights in the streets, besieged Notre Dame Sisters and a priest dragged down from the pulpit. The hero, Rev. James Pacholski, a Holy Cross Parish priest, came down from Northeast Minneapolis to save the day.

Dr. Hughes is a professor at Missouri State University in Springfield, Missouri. He is closely associated with the Polish Cultural Institute & Museum of Winona and frequently travels to Poland, especially the Kaszubian Polish center of Bytow where he has often presented. Joe is enthusiastic about his Kaszubian roots, and the history and culture of Kaszubians in both Poland and the Minnesota/Wisconsin areas.

With both Silesian and Kaszubian major population centers in Minnesota, and yet our ancestors difficulty understanding the languages used between them, there were both sad and hilarious consequences. Enjoy hearing about how a Silesian priest from Northeast Minneapolis came to the aid of a Kaszubian parish in Winona. For more info, see <http://pgsmn.org/>.

This illustrated PowerPoint presentation will highlight the many contributions Poland and its people made to the ultimate destruction of Nazism.

Bio – James S. Pula is Professor of History at Purdue University. He has authored more than a dozen books and is the editor of The Polish American Encyclopedia and the academic journal Polish American Studies.

This presentation will be offered as a Webinar. Additional information will be posted on the PGSA Home Page, PGSA Notebook, and Rodziny prior to the meeting.

<http://www.pbs.org/weta/finding-your-roots/about/>

Several publications, including Nu? What's New? and The Genealogy News, noted that the PBS series Finding Your Roots returns to the air on 5 January 2016! This is good news, because there had been concern the series would be canceled due to controversy. The host, Henry Louis Gates, Jr., complied with actor Ben Affleck’s request to not mention a slave-owning ancestor from the actor’s episode of the genealogy series. An internal review found that Gates had “violated PBS standards,” but apparently not seriously enough to warrant cancellation. An additional researcher/fact-checker, another genealogist, and an expert in DNA-based genealogical research have been added. These steps seem reasonable—Gates’s judgment in this instance may have left something to be desired; but after all, who doesn’t mess up occasionally? I’m glad the series will have a chance to go on, and, I hope, do better. For more information on the guests this year, see the PBS page above.

Logan Kleinwaks has announced a whole new group of sources added to his Genealogy Indexer site. They include yizkor books for a number of towns, and Warsaw Encyclopedic Calendars for 1912, 1915, 1915, 1919, and 1920. Using his site involves a bit of a learning curve, but the access to a wide variety of historical sources makes it worthwhile.

On the Polish Genius site, Raymond Sosnowski posted this URL for selected biographies of men listed in Warsaw Uprising Army Rosters. He wrote, “Click on the first letter of the Surname in question. That presents a list of names. Clicking on a name leads to a bio.” If you happen to have a relative included, this can be a wonderful source of info.

On the Polish Genius mailing list, “Busi_helene” mentioned that The Detroit Free Press, 1837 to September 2015, and Polish Daily News (Dziennik Polski) (1955-1956) have been digitized and released as a subscription for home use. Visit <http://freep.com> and click on Archives (under Quick Links on the left) for additional information to subscribe.

On 20 Oct 2015, Family Roots Publishing announced it had printed and bound the first Silesia volume of the Map Guide to German Parish Registers series. It is volume 53 of the series. The softbound books are now shipping and the hardbound volumes will ship by the first of the week. This volume covers RB Liegnitz, while volumes II and III will cover Breslau and Oppeln respectively. They hope to have those two volumes in print before Christmas. For more information, visit their page above.

The same issue gave this link to “A Shtetl Called Ślawatycze,” memoirs of a man named Henry L. Gitelman who was born in that village from 1933. For those who have Czech roots, you may be interested in Marni Domolewski’s note passing along info on the launch of this new website. The note quoted Martin Kočařík and Paul Ptáček as follows:

We’re excited to announce the launch of our new website, www.MyCzechRoots.
com, which systematically describes typical documents found in the archives of the Czech Republic. The website is designed to act as a ‘field guide’ for genealogists who are working on their Czech family history.

For each record group or type of document, we provide a brief historical background along with the fundamental information about: When, Where, & Why the records were collected, Who collected the records, What information was collected, and Where the records are archived. If the records have been digitized and are available online, we provide links.

We’ve also put together several maps, databases, tables, and other search tools to help individuals locate the documents of their ancestors.

Thomas Mackowiak posted a note to the Polish Genius mailing list, responding to a comment by Debbie Greenlee on the published syllabus for PGSA’s 2015 Fall Conference, as well as the guide to the 2015 Bus Tour of Chicago’s South Side, recently conducted in connection with that Conference. “Once on the page for the store you should click on the Books hyperlink to go to the page that lists the above two items.” I’ve seen copies of these items, and they are first-rate!

Logan Kleinwaks posted notes to the JewishGen newsgroup sharing info on some Polish records available for viewing (but not searching) online. The above link takes you to where the Opole 1867 census images begin. This link is for Podgórze census records for various years: <http://www.szukajwarchiwach.pl/29/93/0/str/1/100#tabJednostki>. Logan added, “Click on a link of interest, then click the ‘Digital copies’ or ‘Skany’ tab at the top to see thumbnails. Click thumbnails to see medium-size images. Click the rectangle icon in the bottom right of medium-size images to see full-size images (which might not fit entirely on your screen, so click and drag the full-size images with your mouse to reveal off-screen sections).”

Civil birth, marriage, and death records for Gąbin/Gombin, Gostynin powiat 1809–1825, are collected in scans at <http://szukajwarchiwach.pl/50/398/0/str/1/100?ps=True#tabJednostki>. Also available are Warsaw 1808-1825 birth, marriage, and death records, with images for District I beginning here: <http://szukajwarchiwach.pl/72/183/0/str/1/100?ps=True#tabJednostki>. For Districts II through VIII, use the same URL but replace 183 with the numbers 184 (District II) through 190 (District VIII). You may have to experiment a little to get the results you want; but it can be worth it if you had ancestors living in Warsaw during that period. Many thanks to Logan for sharing this info!
A recent post to the Facebook group Polish Genealogy mentioned that “The Polish segment of Genealogy Roadshow-Detroit episode, featuring the Polish Mission’s Eugenia Gorecki and Ceil Wendt Jensen, can be viewed” at the above URL.

Additional databases have been added to the Michigan Polish Heritage website. You can find them here. You can also visit the Michigan Polish Heritage Facebook page, <https://www.facebook.com/miplheritage>.

Another note posted to JewishGen explained that the Harvard Law School Library is preparing to put its collection online, a collection described as “unrivalled except for the US Library of Congress. The collection includes nearly every state, federal, territorial and tribal decision since US Colonial times. Now they are coming into the digital age by digitizing 40 million pages. The records will be offered free on this searchable database of case law. Currently there is a charge for retrieving these records—which are in hard copy. The entire underlying database, not just limited search results, will be shared with nonprofit organizations and scholars that wish to develop specialized applications. Ravel and Harvard will withhold the database from other commercial groups for eight years. After that, it will be available to anyone for any purpose.” You can read more in the New York Times article at the above URL.
